This course is endorsed by FITEC, New Zealand's pulp and paper industry training organisation. The knowledge gained from participation in this course may assist you in gaining unit standards toward relevant national qualifications in pulp and paper

Who Should Attend?

This one day course is designed for people who are new to the pulp and paper industry and who want to know the basics of how pulp and paper is made and what the products are used for. It is also highly recommended for people working in non-manufacturing roles in the industry, such as forestry, wood-chipping, administration, sales, marketing, IT and suppliers, who need to understand more about the processes, products and their applications.

The Course

The course will expose participants to the processes from tree → pulp → paper → end products, with particular focus on New Zealand Industry. Various unit processes will be covered in sufficient detail to provide a good understanding of pulp and paper making and the properties and uses of paper. The course includes two practical sessions during which various types of paper are physically examined and handsheets will be made.

The Presenters

The presentations will be given by Dexter Morgan and Gerd Matthesius. The pair have many years of industry experience, and have run this course for a number of years.
